Introduction

Adapptive and Inclusive recreation programs are designed to provide individuals with physical and developmental disabilities a chance to participate in recreation programs with their peers while enhancing their physical, social, and emotional wellbeing.

Adapted vs. Adaptive:

Adapted and Adaptive are used interchangeably to refer to sports for individuals with disabilities.

Adapted is used to describe the process of modifying rules, equipment, facilities, ect. to afford individuals with physical disabilities access to meaningful sport participation.

Adaptive is used to describe behaviors, skills, and functions such as one's ability to meet standards of maturation, learning, personal independence, and/or social responsibility.

What is the difference between Adaptive and Inclusive Programs

Adaptive programs

Modify activities to meet the needs of a specific group of participants, such as those with physical, developmental, or intellectual disabilities. These programs may use adapted equipment, rules, content, structure, support, or environment.

Inclusive programs

Allow people with and without disabilities to participate in the same activity. Inclusive programs are created to provide an atmosphere where all can thrive.

How do you define disability?

We define disability as any condition of the body or mind that makes it more difficult for the individual to do certain activities and interact with the world around them. The following is a list of, but is not limited to, disabilities that warrant adaptive and inclusive accommodations

ADD/ADHD
Amputation
Asperger's
Autism
Cardiac Rehabilitation
Cerebral Palsy
Down Syndrome
Injury Rehabilitation
Muscular Dystrophy
Obesity
Spinal Cord Injury
Spinal Bifida
Stroke Victims

History

Returning disabled veterans of World War II form a One Legged Football Club in May 1952 in London, UK.

The earliest physical recreational opportunities for people with disabilities were based in medical response to physical needs. Adaptive sports began as a means to rehabilitate veterans from World War II, Korea, and the Vietnam War.

Before World War II, paraplegia was considered to be a virtual death sentence. The life expectancy of soldiers who suffered traumatic spinal-cord injuries during World War I was estimated at 18 months. Most died from sepsis or infection. The “dead-enders” and “no-hoppers” who survived were shunted off to institutions or hidden from view by their families. They were stigmatized for their disability and considered unlikely prospects for employment or marriage.

Background

Adaptive sports and inclusive recreation can be traced back to the 1940s and 1950s.

In 1948, the first competition for wheelchair athletes was held at Stoke Mandeville Hospital in England; organized by Dr. Guttmann and featured 16 injured servicemen and women competing in archery, darts, and javelin.

In 1952, Janet Pomeroy opened the Recreation Center for the Handicapped, which was one of the first examples of therapeutic recreation.

Reasonable Accommodations

In order for individuals with disabilities to participate as fully as possible, reasonable accommodations are provided in accordance with Title II of the Americans with Disabilities Act (ADA). Reasonable accommodations are individualized techniques and resources used to enhance program participation without fundamentally altering a program.

A.I.R program requires that participants register for age-appropriate activities and programs based on their individual abilities.
